A quarterly round up from Sponsor a Child USA
January 2026

Education is the right of every child - not a favor, but a sacred duty we owe to the future. - Swami Vivekananda

Dear donors and volunteers,

I am delighted to share reflections from my three-day visit to the Milwaukee chapter during Sewa Milan in December. It was a powerful reminder of what makes the Sponsor A Child (SAC) program truly special: that our work is sustained not just by generosity, but by deep human connection.

It was insightful to meet our donors and volunteers, hear their experiences, discuss challenges, and brainstorm opportunities to strengthen relationships that often span thousands of miles between the US and Bharat. What emerged from these interactions is a portrait of a community actively partnering in a shared mission to make quality education accessible to underprivileged children in Bharat.

One of the most moving aspects of the visit was witnessing the extraordinary emotional investment donors have in the children they sponsor. Many arrived at Sewa Milan carrying printed profiles of their sponsored children, eager to reconnect with the stories and faces that inspire their support.

These moments underscored a simple truth: for our donors, sponsorship is personal.

The enthusiasm wasn't limited to adults. Children attending Sewa Milan showed keen interest in the SAC program. Introducing our youth to programs like LEAD fosters early awareness, empathy, and long-term involvement, planting seeds for the next generation of changemakers. If you have a rising teen, please explore the LEAD Program with your local Sewa International chapter.

I am honored to have experienced the warmth, dedication, and partnership shown by the Milwaukee community at the Sewa Milan. It reaffirmed that when donors feel heard, informed, and connected, the impact of the program grows exponentially. As the Sponsor a Child program continues to grow, these shared moments of connection, across chapters, generations, and geographies, will remain at the heart of its success.

Yours sincerely,

Ranjani Kapur, Donor Coordinator - Sponsor A Child
